INTRODUCTION TO VOLUME II.

In this volume I have continued to use Cohen's Medailles Imperiales as the basis as it is still used by most dealers and auction sale cataloguers as a reference. These numbers will be found in black on the left hand side. Cohen's system was to list the coins alphabetically according to their reverse legends. This is not the most scientific arrangement but it does lend itself to easy reference. Where I have varieties not in Cohen I have added them by putting a, b, c, etc. to his numbers.

In many cases where there is definitely an error in Cohen I have put it right without any indication. In other cases where it is not certain whether Cohen's coin exists or not I have left it in without a price; in many of these cases a known coin is given as an a number.

There are other numbers also without price. This indicates that either I am not certain if the coin exists, that a genuine piece is known or that it is a hybrid.

Hybrids. These are coins that do not fit into the normal series and are usually contemporary forgeries, many of them are plated pieces. There are a large number of these in the Vespasian period.

Obverses. After the first few pages, I have put the obverse legends and types at the beginning of the reign with letters against each; A, B, C, etc. for legend, a, b, c, etc. for type. In the catalogue I have then given Ac, Ba, etc. as the case may be. This has been done to save space and avoid a lot of unnecessary repetition. To overcome the annoyance of having to continually refer back, a duplicate page can be unfolded giving the obverse legends and types so that they can be used with any page of the catalogue.

Value. The value given in the right hand column is that which I would place on a VF (very fine) coin today in 1967. By this I mean the price a dealer might reasonably charge, but not the price a dealer would pay for such a piece.

I cannot stress too strongly, that the value of any coin depends very largely on its state of preservation and Roman coins are no exception. A poor denarius, unless a great rarity, is practically worthless, on the other hand a coin in superb mint state would be worth much more than the stated price. [See next page].

Illustrations. I am sorry that it has not been found possible to include more illustrations, but of this series it is hardly necessary and it has been found impossible to find them. To get them drawn would be a costly business and it is our endeavour to keep all our books cheap so as to be within the range of all collectors.

Though there is little or no original research in this volume it has, nevertheless, taken quite some time to prepare, and I hope that not a few collectors will find it of service.

I wish to thank Mr. David Sear in helping with the valuations and for reading the proofs, also Mr. Frank Purvey for photographing additional illustrations.

H. A. SEABY

There has been a change of emphasis in the collecting of denarii since the publication of the second edition. Whereas collectors eleven years ago could afford an academic collection of reverse types, the tendency seems now to collect portraits or reverses of particular historic or aesthetic interest. The repricing in this volume therefore reflects this trend.

Our thanks are due to the Keeper of the Department of Coins and Medals, British Museum and Mr. G. R. Arnold for allowing us to photograph coins from their collections.

TIBERIUS.

14-37 A.D.

Tiberius Claudius Nero, the son of T. Claudius Nero and Livia, was born in 42 B.C. In 38 Livia was married to Octavian (Augustus) and from then on devoted her life to the advancement of her sons. From 20 B.C. to 10 A.D. Tiberius spent most of his time as a general and a successful one. In A.D. 3 he was adopted by Augustus, who recognized him as his likely successor. About a month after the death of Augustus he was proclaimed emperor as Tiberius Julius Caesar Augustus. Loyalty to the memory and policy of his predecessor was the basis of his rule. He was a very sound administrator and left his subject peoples much more prosperous than they had been hitherto. In A.D. 26, at the age of 68, he left Rome for Capreae where he spent the last years of his life. The Ministry and Crucifixion of Jesus Christ occurred in this reign.

ANTONIA

Younger daughter of Mark Antony and Octavia, she was born about 36 B.C. She married Nero Claudius Drusus about 16 B.C. and was the mother of Germanicus, Livilla and Claudius. Caligula, her grandson, at first conferred honours upon her, but later she fell out of favour, and he may have been responsible for her suicide in A.D. 37.

CALIGULA (CAIUS)

37-41 A.D.

Caius Julius Caesar Germanicus was born at Antium in A.D. 12, the son of Germanicus and Agrippina. The name Caligula by which he is usually known is only a nickname, which was bestowed on him by the soldiers when he was only a few years old, as he wore big military boots, the word means "baby boots." He was named by Tiberius as his heir and succeeded that emperor in A.D. 37. In his early months he honoured the memory of his father and mother, then he became ill and possibly somewhat insane. His reign was noted for public oppression and his personal depravity. He was murdered in his palace in A.D. 41.

CALIGULA AND AGRIPPINA SENIOR

Agrippina was the daughter of Marcus Agrippa and Julia, daughter of Augustus, and she was born in 15 B.C. About A.D. 5 she married Germanicus and had nine children, including Caligula and Agrippina Junior. She was banished to the island of Pandataria in A.D. 29 on the instructions of Tiberius and starved to death in 33.

CLAUDIUS

41-54 A.D.

Tiberius Claudius Nero Germanicus was the youngest son of Nero Claudius Drusus and Antonia, and was born at Lyons in 10 B.C. He was proclaimed emperor by the Praetorian Guard, on the death of his nephew Caligula. Claudius personally took part in the invasion of Britain in A.D. 43 and was present at the capture of Camulodunum (Colchester). The provinces of Mauretania and Thrace were added to the empire during his reign. Claudius proved himself a good administrator, but in his latter years his powers were failing. He died in A.D. 54 and it is generally believed he was poisoned by his fourth wife, Agrippina Junior.

The legend on the illustration above does not occur on the silver.

MESSALINA.

Valeria Messalina was the third wife of Claudius, whom she married some time before his accession, and the mother of Octavia and Britannicus. She was put to death for her part in a conspiracy against Claudius in A.D. 48. She must not be confused with Statilia Messalina the third wife of Nero.

AGRIPPINA JUNIOR AND CLAUDIUS.

Julia Agrippina was the eldest daughter of Germanicus and Agrippina Senior and was born A.D. 15 at Ara Ubiorum. She was first married to Cn. Domitius Ahenobarbus in A.D. 28 by whom she had a son, Nero; next she married Crispus Passienus. In 39 she was banished, but was recalled by her uncle Claudius, who married her in 49. She was believed to have poisoned Claudius to make room for Nero. At first she was all powerful, but she lost the favour of her son and in 59 was murdered at Baiae on Nero's instructions.

NERO.

54-68 A.D.

Nero Claudius Caesar, son of Cn. Domitius Ahenobarbus and Agrippina Junior, was born A.D. 37. On the death of Claudius he succeeded to the empire and his mother was at first the power behind the throne, but in 55 she went into retirement, and in 59 she was murdered. He was very enthusiastic about art and sport, but his extravagances and vanity made him most unpopular. This was increased through the fire which destroyed half of Rome in 64. At last in 68 revolt broke out in Gaul, Spain and Africa, the Praetorians at Rome deserted him and Nero fled and committed suicide.

The legend on the illustration above does not occur on the silver.

CLODIUS MACER.

68 A.D.

Lucius Clodius Macer was legate in Africa under Nero. On the death of the latter he refused to acknowledge Galba, and threatened the Roman corn supply from Africa. He acted as a champion of the Senate and called himself proprætor. He raised a new legion which he called Legio I Macriana liberatrix, but he was soon reduced and executed by Galba's orders.

GALBA.

68-69 A.D.

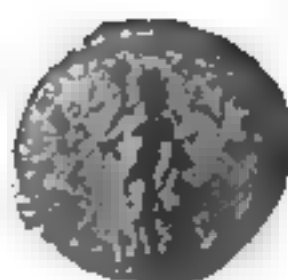

Servius Sulpicius Galba was an administrator with a brilliant record who was highly esteemed by Tiberius, Caligula and Claudius. From A.D. 60 he was governor of Hispania Tarraconensis. During the period of disturbances preceding the death of Nero he was proclaimed emperor by his troops; and the Senate having declared in his favour he proceeded to Rome. However, his avarice was notorious and he did not pay his troops what he had promised them, so they turned against him. Otho organised a conspiracy and the Praetorian Guard assassinated him after a reign of only seven months.

CIVIL WAR,

A.D. 68-69.

These are coins of this period which (a) do not bear a portrait or legend of one of the contending emperors or (b) are copies of coins of Augustus.

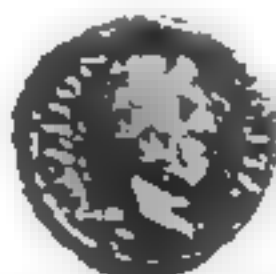

N.B.—The numbers on the left are those given by Cohen for (a) under the heading of Galba and for (b) under Augustus.

Mattingly and Sydenham in R.I.C. number these pieces under the following headings: Spain (S), Gaul (G), Africa (only G40), "Augustus" issues (A), "Divus Augustus" issues (DA), "Military" Upper Germany (M), Gallic Revolt (GR). The letters in brackets are our abbreviations of these divisions.

OTHO.

69 A.D.

Marcus Salvius Otho was born in A.D. 32. He was a friend of Nero who fell in love with his wife Poppaea Sabina. Nero therefore sent him to Lusitania as governor. On Nero's death he supported Galba and hoped to be his successor. Galba, however, adopted L. Piso, whereupon Otho revolted and was hailed emperor on 15th Jan. 69 on the assassination of Galba. The legions on the Rhine, however, chose Vitellius, who marched to Italy. Otho's army was beaten and he committed suicide on the 16th April.

VITELLIUS.

69 A.D.

Aulus Vitellius, born in A.D. 15, was a friend of Caligula and Claudius. He was consul in 48, proconsul in Africa and legate there under his brother. Given the command of the legions in Lower Germany by Galba, he was proclaimed emperor by his troops on 2nd Jan. 69; other troops had joined his army and he started to march towards Italy before he heard of the death of Galba. His generals defeated Otho in N. Italy and he then had undisputed command of the whole empire; but he gave more attention to the pleasures of the table than to the business of government. On July 1st Vespasian was hailed emperor at Alexandria and the Illyrian legions declared for him and invaded Italy. The troops dispatched against them by Vitellius were defeated, and Vitellius himself was later seized, dragged through the streets of Rome, and killed by the mob.

VESPASIAN.

69-79 A.D.

Titus Flavius Sabinus Vespasianus was born at Sabine Reate in A.D. 9, the son of Flavius Sabinus, a tax-gatherer. His military skill carried him to a series of important posts, including aedile in 38, praetor in 40. He commanded part of the forces which invaded Britain under Claudius and for his services here he received the triumphalia ornamenta. About 63 he was proconsul in Africa and in 66 he accompanied Nero to Greece; later that year, Nero appointed him to quell the Jewish rebellion. On the 1st July 69 the legions at Alexandria proclaimed him emperor and at the end of the year, on the death of Vitellius, the Senate confirmed his appointment. His first task was to repair the damage caused by the civil wars and he was well fitted for the task. He had left his eldest son, Titus, to complete the subjection of the Jews. A little later Titus was virtually made a partner in the administration of the government. Vespasian was a just and industrious ruler and died on June 24th 79 A.D. He was deified by the Senate; this was certainly justified as he had restored the sanity and prosperity of the Roman world.

TITUS.

79-81 A.D.

Titus Flavius Vespasianus, born in A.D. 40, was the son of Vespasian and was educated with Britannicus. He served in Germany and Britain and commanded a legion in the Palestine campaign. When Vespasian left to assume the purple, Titus remained to carry on the war and captured Jerusalem in 70. On his return to Rome he was promoted and helped his father with the management of affairs. On his father's death he automatically succeeded to the empire, but he died two years later. He was extremely popular and his death caused great sorrow. Two disasters occurred during his short reign, the eruption of Vesuvius on 24th Aug. 79 which engulfed Pompeii, and the plague and fire of Rome in 80.

JULIA TITI.

Daughter of Titus and Marcia Furnilla, she married Flavius Sabinus, nephew of Vespasian. Her uncle Domitian fell in love with her and she lived with him as his wife after he had disposed of her husband and repudiated Domitia his wife. The first and the DIVA coins were struck under Domitian and the rest under Titus.

DOMITIAN.

81-96 A.D.

T. Flavius Domitianus was born in 51 A.D. and was the youngest son of Vespasian and Domitilla. Vespasian intended him to succeed the childless Titus, but he had little or no power before the latter's death, by which time he was a man full of resentment. Till 88 he ruled well and without bloodshed but after that date he became more ruthless and his last three years were ones of oppression. There were numerous plots against his life which caused many executions. He himself was finally murdered and his wife Domitia was largely responsible.

NERVA 96-98 A.D.

M. Cocceius Nerva was born at Narnia about A.D. 30 and was the grandson of the M. Cocceius Nerva, the lawyer friend of Tiberius. He was praetor designate in 65, consul with Vespasian in 71; and, after becoming a distinguished lawyer himself, was consul again in 90, this time with Domitian. On the latter's death he was proclaimed emperor by the Senate, as they considered him so suitable for the post. However, he lacked the capacity to command and although he did much to improve conditions he had little administrative ability. In the autumn of 97 he formally adopted Trajan and gave him full powers. On 25th Jan. 98 he died after only 16 months of just and blameless rule.

The illustration above, being radiate, is not taken from a silver coin.

TRAJAN

Marcus Ulpius Traianus was the son of M. Ulpius and a Spanish mother and was born at Atalica in Spain about 52 A.D. He was a military tribune for ten years and later quaestor and praetor. In c. 80 he countered the revolt of L. Saturninus in Germany and in 91 was Consul. It was whilst Governor of Upper Germany that he learned of his adoption by Nerva. On the latter's death, a few months later, he became emperor, but it was not till the next year that he returned to Rome. He was popular with the army and a natural leader who did not abuse his powers. During his reign there was carried out a considerable amount of public works, road-building, bridges, baths, etc., much of which was paid for by the treasure won in the second Dacian war (5 million lb. weight of gold and 10 million lb. of silver).

Trajan successfully campaigned against the Dacians and Parthians, and the column which was erected to commemorate his victories over the former still stands in Rome. This is shown on his coins and many others record his victories. He was a just and wise ruler and died in Cilicia in August 117 on his way home from the Parthian war.

Restored Coins of Trajan.

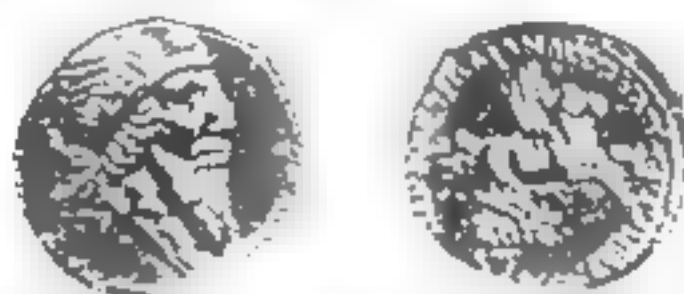

These are listed with the numbers and in the order given in H. Mattingly's article "The Restored Coins of Trajan" in the Numismatic Chronicle 1926; where he says "To sum up: the main object of the restoration of Republican denarii seems to have been to revive the glorious memories of the old days and to link them up with the new glories of the Empire, while at the same time the claims of religion and the ancestral honours of the Roman aristocracy were not entirely forgotten".

These numbers also correspond to those given in B.M.C., p. 138-141. The B. nos. are those from Babelon, Vol. II, p. 571 ff.

HADRIAN.

117-138 A.D.

Publius Aelius Hadrianus was born in A.D. 76, the son of P. Aelius Hadrianus Afer and Domitia Paulina of Gades. His paternal grandfather had married Ulpia, the aunt of Trajan. His father died when he was about 10 and Trajan became one of his guardians. At 15 he entered the army and in 93 A.D. Trajan sent for him to come to Rome and by 95 he was a tribune to the 11nd legion. In 99 he returned to Rome with Trajan and in the next year married the emperor's grand-niece, Vibia Sabina. He was in high favour with the emperor and empress and served in various capacities. He was appointed governor of Syria during Trajan's Parthian war and when the latter, owing to severe illness, decided to return home he left Hadrian in charge of the army as well. On Aug. 9, 117 Hadrian was informed at Antioch of his adoption by Trajan and on the 11th of the latter's death in Cilicia, and he became emperor.

Hadrian's first important act was to abandon all thought of conquest beyond the Euphrates, and Mesopotamia and Assyria were given back to the Parthians and the Armenians were allowed a king of their own. One of the principal events of this reign is the emperor's tours through all parts of the empire, which he advertised on his coins; and it was on these journeys that he greatly improved the defences of the frontiers. He is best known in this country as the builder of the great wall from the Tyne to the Solway; much of which is still to be seen. During his period in the East he had to deal with a Jewish revolt that broke out in 132.

There is little doubt that he was one of the most capable emperors who ever occupied the throne and he devoted his whole life to the improvement of the state. One of his chief objects was the abolition of distinctions between the provinces and the mother country. He put down graft, he reorganized the army and greatly improved the judicial system. Many towns were built and many magnificent buildings were erected during his reign and he was a patron of the arts.

When his health began to fail a couple of years before his death, he adopted L. Ceionius Commodus, under the name of L. Aelius Caesar; but Aelius was in feeble health and died on the 1st Jan. 138. He then adopted Antoninus on condition that he should adopt M. Annius Verus (M. Aurelius) and Lucius Verus, the son of Aelius. Hadrian died at Baiae on 10 July 138.

SABINA

Vibia Sabina, daughter of L. Vibius Sabinus and Matidia, married Hadrian in A.D. 100 through Plotina's favour. She accompanied her husband on some of his journeys, though their marriage was far from happy. She died in 136 or 137 and was consecrated by Hadrian, who issued a special coinage.

ANTONINUS PIUS

138-161 A.D.

Titus Aurelius Fulvus Boionius Antoninus, born at Lanuvium in A.D. 86, was the son of Aurelius Fulvus and Arria Fadilla, both of consular stock. He was brought up by his grandfather, Arrius Antoninus, a friend of the younger Pliny. He adopted a senatorial career and was consul in 120, later distinguishing himself as proconsul in Asia. He had married Faustina in A.D. 110 or some time a little later. He was scrupulous, loyal and gentle, and had earned the respect of Hadrian who, on the death of Aelius, chose him as his successor provided that he, Antoninus, adopted M. Annius Verus (Marcus Aurelius), Faustina's nephew, and L. Ceionius Commodus (L. Verus), the son of Aelius.

During Hadrian's last months Antoninus was virtually ruler and his succession was smooth on the former's death. One of his first acts was to beg the Senate to decree divine honours for Hadrian and this gained him his name of Pius: he had previously taken, on his adoption, the name T. Aelius Hadrianus Antoninus. The history of his reign is almost blank in the records, owing to the tranquility and prosperity the Roman world enjoyed under his patient, judicious and impartial rule. He sought to increase the dignity of the Senate and gave back Italy to its management. During his reign another wall was built in Britain, that from the Forth to the Clyde, now known as the Wall of Antoninus.

Antoninus died of fever at Lorium on March 7th, 161. His only surviving child, Faustina the Younger, had married Marcus Aurelius who succeeded him.

MARCUS AURELIUS.

161-180 A.D.

M. Annius Verus was born in Rome, A.D. 121, son of Annius Verus, the brother of Faustina I, and Domitia Calvilla. He early gained the favour of Hadrian who supervised his education. In 138, along with Aelius, he was adopted by Antoninus and in 145 he married the latter's daughter, Faustina. On his adoption he took the name M. Aelius Aurelius Verus, but when the title Caesar was conferred on him in 139 he dropped the name of Verus. On his marriage he was given tribunician and proconsular power and enjoyed limited co-government with Antoninus. He was a great student and about 146 he gave up rhetoric for Stoic philosophy. He remained a Stoic all his life, but retained the humanity of his disposition.

He succeeded in Mar. 161 and he immediately admitted L. Verus as his partner in the administration, and he betrothed him to his daughter Lucilla. In the first year of his reign Faustina gave birth to twins, one was Commodus, who was to become emperor.

His reign was disturbed by attacks from all sides, and frontier wars broke out in many places. The Parthians broke into Syria and the war there was not concluded till 165, when the returning army brought back a pestilence with them that spread throughout the empire. Early in 169 Verus died and in that same year war broke out again in Pannonia and for the next ten years Aurelius was continually campaigning in Central Europe or Syria. It was during these wars that he wrote his celebrated "Meditations". He died after a short illness in 180 while still on the frontier on the Danube.

His reign was chiefly notable for legal reforms, one might say he was an improver rather than an innovator. He was a careful, generous and conscientious ruler, but was consistently hostile to Christianity, which was logical enough in his case.

The earliest coins show a young man with a clean-shaven face, then with a slight beard. The portraiture slowly gets older and ends with a middle-aged man usually with a longish beard.

N.B. "A" before a reference number indicates that the piece will be found under Antoninus Pius and "C" under Commodus.

FAUSTINA II

Wife of Marcus Aurelius

The younger daughter of Antoninus and Faustina I, she was born about A.D. 127. In 139 she was betrothed to her cousin M. Aurelius whom she married in 145 and became 'Augusta' in 146 on the birth of her first child. She accompanied her husband on his campaigns, and died in the East in 175 when she was consecrated by Marcus.

The portraiture on her coins varies considerably and some are of superb style. Speaking generally on the early coins she has her hair in a bun or chignon at the back of the head fairly high, whereas on the later coins it is a bun more in the nape of the neck.

N.B.—Under the references "A" indicates that the coin has an Antoninus Pius number whereas "M" indicates a Marcus Aurelius number.

LUCIUS VERUS

Co-emperor with Aurelius, 161-169

Lucius Ceionius Commodus was born in Rome A.D. 130, the son of L. Aelius, who was adopted by Hadrian in 136. He was adopted by Antoninus Pius in 138, at the request of Hadrian, and then changed his name to L. Aurelius Verus. He was brought up with Marcus Aurelius who directed his studies. On the latter's accession Aurelius at once made him "Augustus" and colleague with tribunician power. In 164 he was married to Lucilla. He was a weak man and his death in 169 was a relief to his senior partner.

LUCILLA

Wife of Lucius Verus.

Annia Lucilla was a daughter of Marcus Aurelius born about A.D. 148. In 164 she was married to Verus at Ephesus and granted the title "Augusta". She survived her husband and about 182 conspired against her brother Commodus; she was exiled to Capraea and subsequently put to death.

COMMODUS

177-192 A.D.

Lucius Aelius Aurelius Commodus, elder son of Marcus Aurelius, was born on August 31st, A.D. 161, at Lanuvium. He was made Caesar in 166, and Augustus in 177 and as such was associated in the government with his father, whom he accompanied in the same year to the second German-Sarmatian war. On the death of Aurelius, with whom he was serving in the war against the Quadi and Marcomanni, Commodus concluded a peace and hurried back to Rome. On arrival he celebrated a triumph and changed his name to Marcus Commodus Antoninus.

On his accession there were great hopes that he might continue the fine tradition of his immediate predecessors, but he proved a most unworthy son of a noble father. Cruel, blood-thirsty and licentious, he disgraced the purple by fighting wild beasts in the amphitheatre, and his megalomania caused him to believe himself the reincarnation of Hercules and to demand the worship of the people.

There were many plots against his life, all unsuccessful until he was finally murdered on 31st Dec. 192. Luckily during his reign the empire was little troubled by foreign wars. The frontier of Dacia was successfully defended against the Scythians and Sarmatians. In Britain the Antonine wall was breached and the Scottish lowlands overrun, but the raiders were dealt with by Ulpius Marcellus. There was also a mutiny by the British legions, but this was put down by Pertinax, who afterwards became emperor.

CRISPINA

Wife of Commodus

Crispina was the daughter of L. Fulvius Bruttius Praesens, who accompanied Marcus Aurelius on his expedition against the Sarmations. After this triumph Commodus was associated with Marcus Aurelius as co-emperor and he was married to Crispina who was given the title Augusta.

Obverse legends.

- A CRISPINA AVG.
II CRISPINA AVGVSTA.

Obverse types.

- r. Bust draped right.
l. Bust draped left.

N.B.—The reference numbers, except for Cohen, are Commodus numbers.
